THE GRAY

Each year, nearly a thousand students leave San Diego High School. They like to remember it as a veritable haven of happiness, not because of its outstanding buildings, classes or activities, but because of their own presence there. Sometimes, however, they have doubts about the perfection of themselves and of the time they spent at San Diego High School. It is to reassure themselves of their unequalled beauty, intelligence and personality that the graduating seniors publish an annual.

Knowing this year's class as you do, you can see what a tremendous job it would have been to present them and their senior year as sublime. Believe us, we tried to insert the ego-building prose that properly goes in an annual. Alas, we failed and the resulting volume is less of a whitewash than a mudbath of the year's events.

And so, if you're facing north, go east, dear reader, go east.

First things first, and no one questions the fact that the Faculty members were among the first things at San Diego High. Their main duty was to see that something went on at school besides dances, ditch-days, and the electric lights.

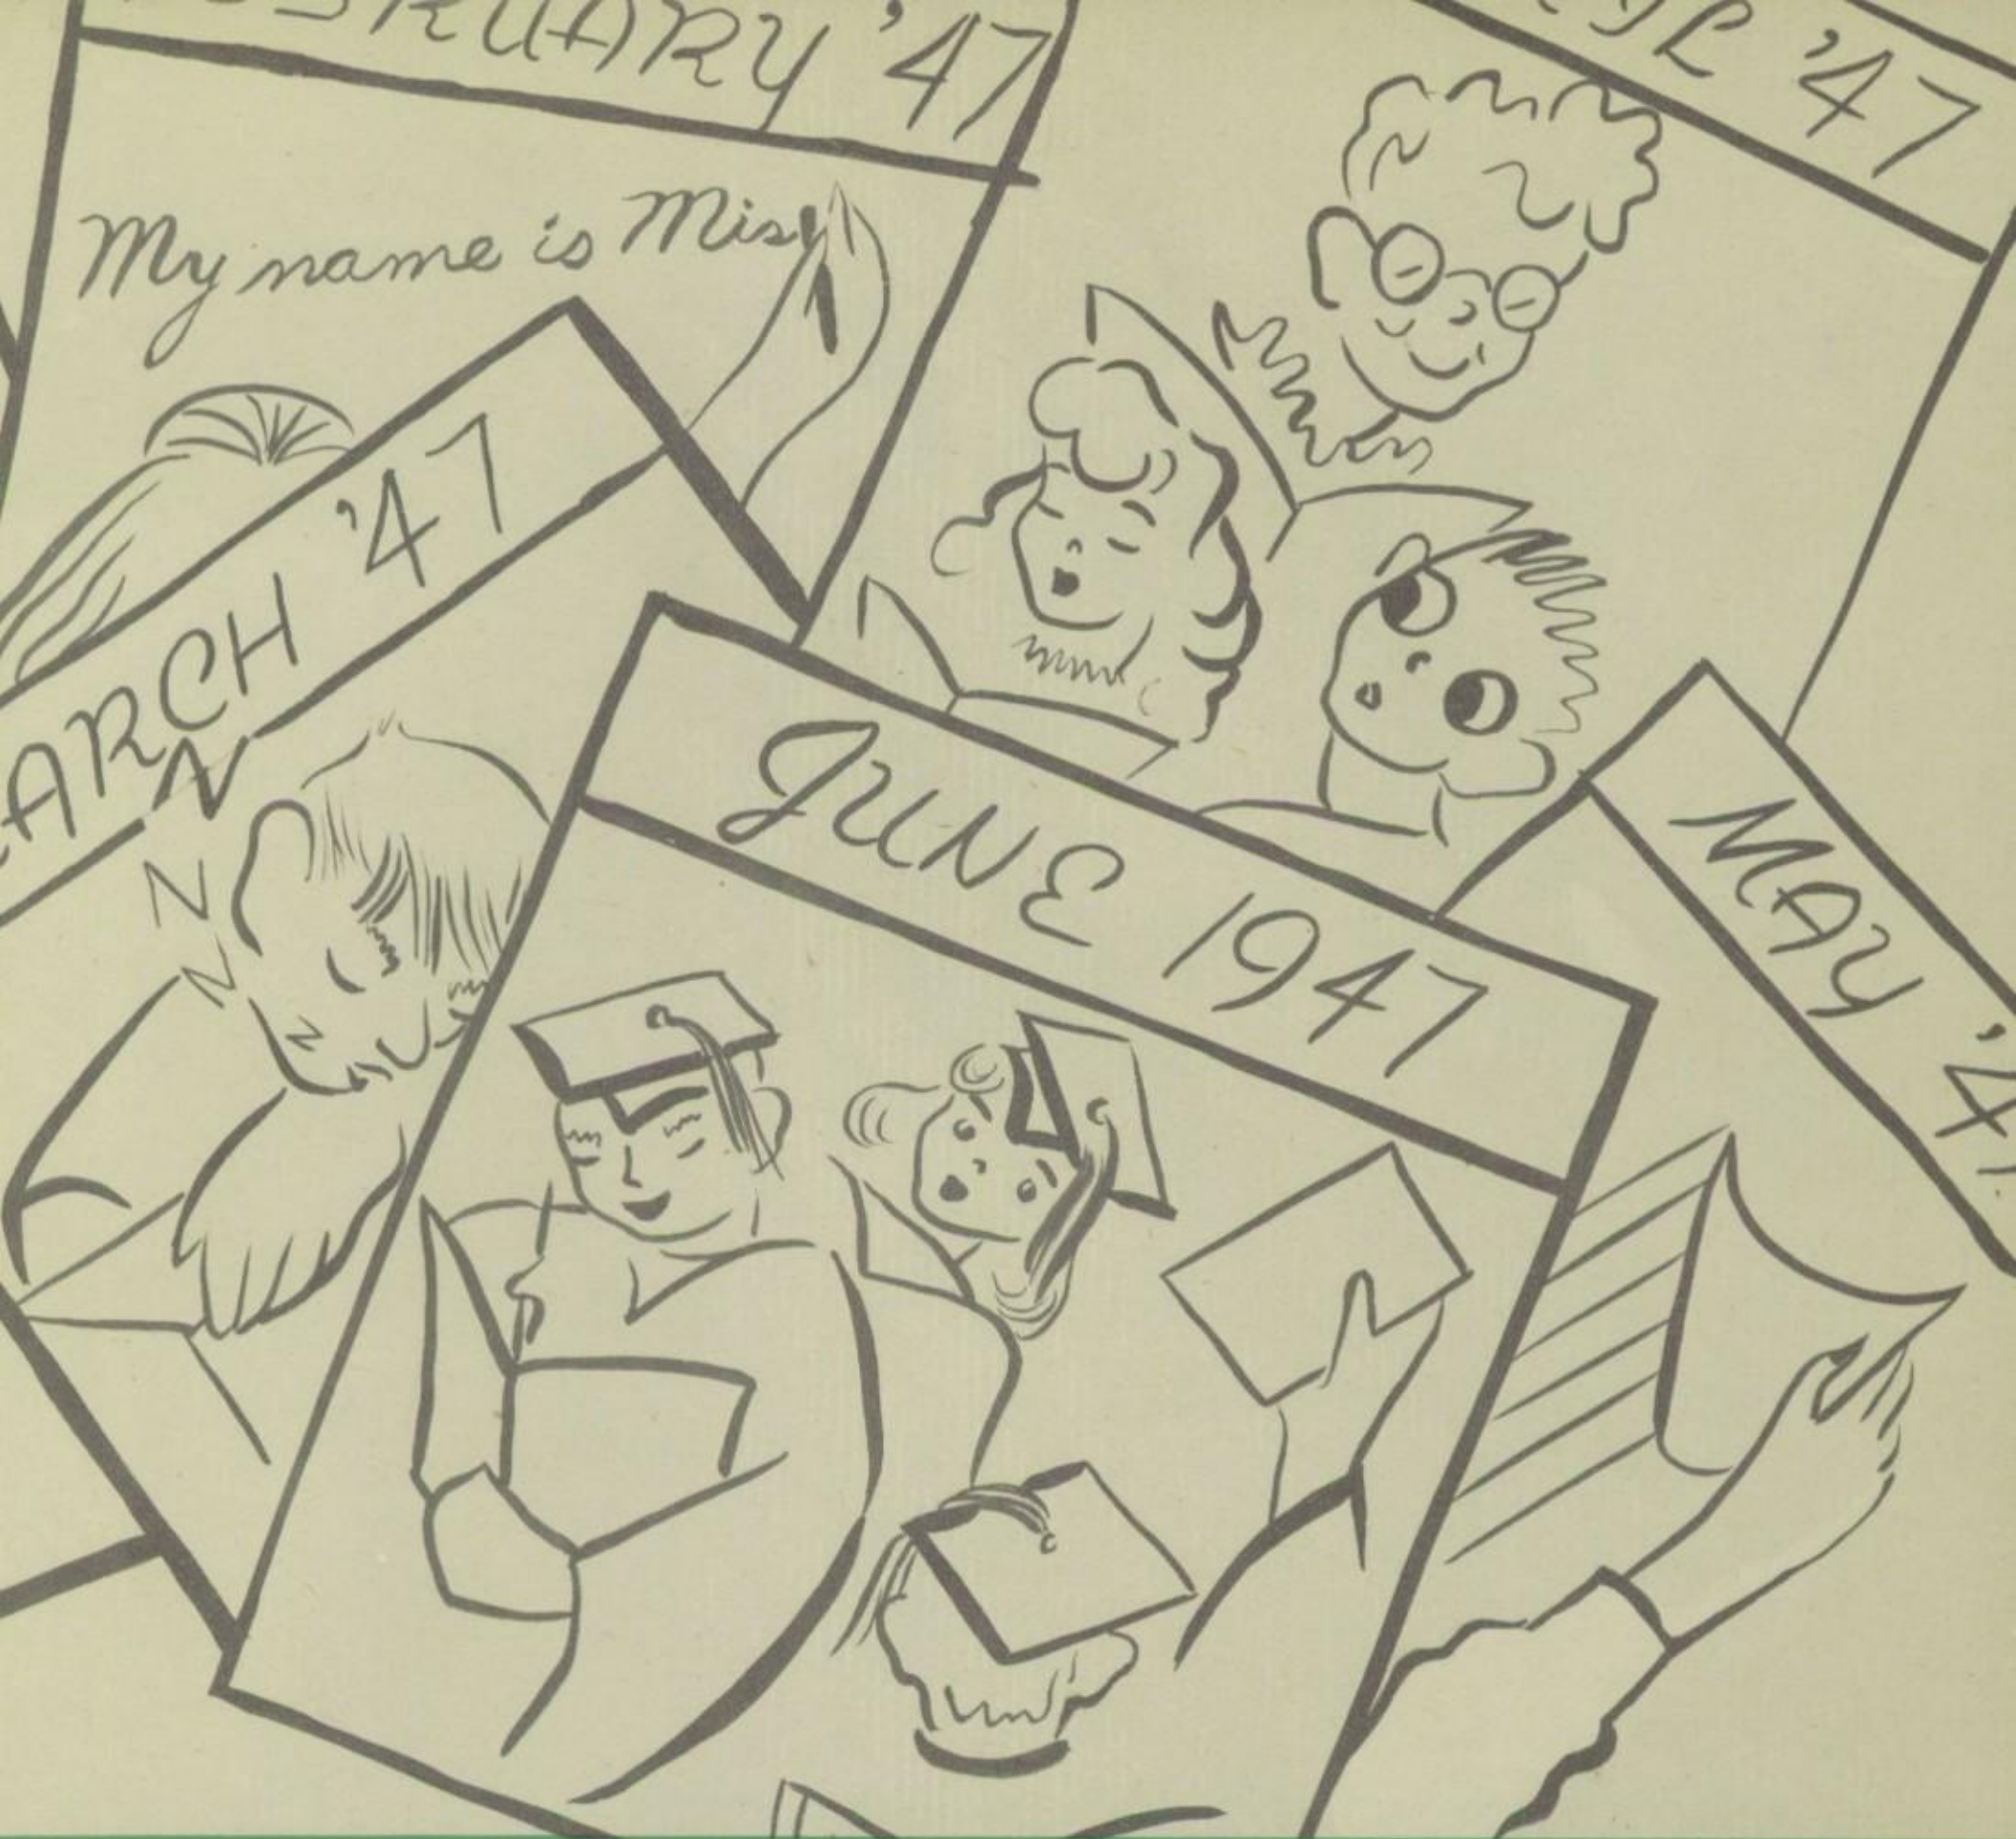

SEPTEMBER: September Song becomes a dirge, and that off-key voice singing it is the Faculty's; for in the Fall they have to drop Summer's anonymity, which has allowed them to pose as people, and become teachers again.

OCTOBER: Each October the entire Faculty trot out to Sunset Cliffs to welcome Columbus. Of course, they don't actually meet Columbus; but they did—once.

NOVEMBER: The Faculty go electioneering.

DECEMBER: The Faculty brave the dangers of school dances. Most of them hang around the corners bemoaning the fact that Charleston is now only the name of a city.

JANUARY: Registration! In the heat of depriving students of their favorite teachers, the faculty members forget to give themselves their own docile proteges.

FEBRUARY: The breaking-in of new classes begins. During the breaking-in many break out, and counselors are swamped while minds and classes are changed.

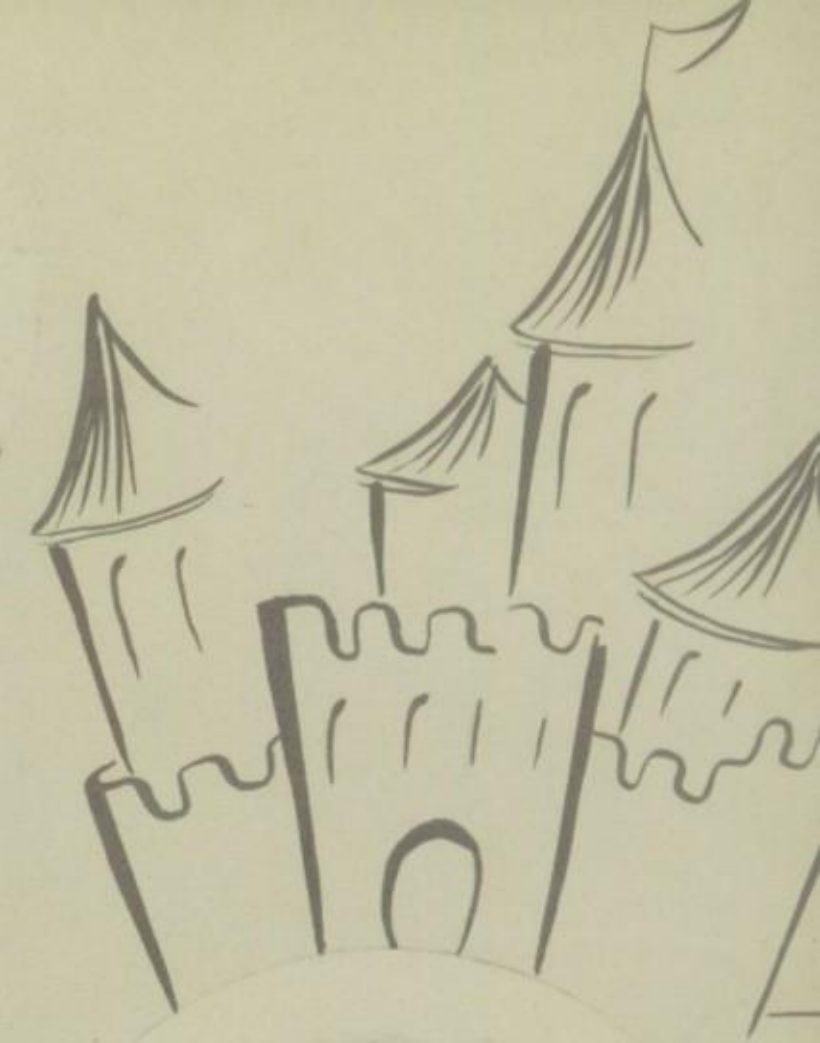

MARCH: At least half of the students are absent on the pretense of attending "Carmelita" rehearsals. There are some people at rehearsals, too.

APRIL: The teachers and the students are just sitting there warming the seats.

MAY: The students are singing the "I'm Doing in One Month What I Should Have Been Doing All Year" blues, while the teachers just smile.

JUNE: The teachers rush over to the stadium to give the Seniors a glad hand of friendship. Then they settle down for a long—well, whatever teachers do in summer.

Girls! Who are we to discuss them, with their mysteries, their intrigues, and their reasonless ways?

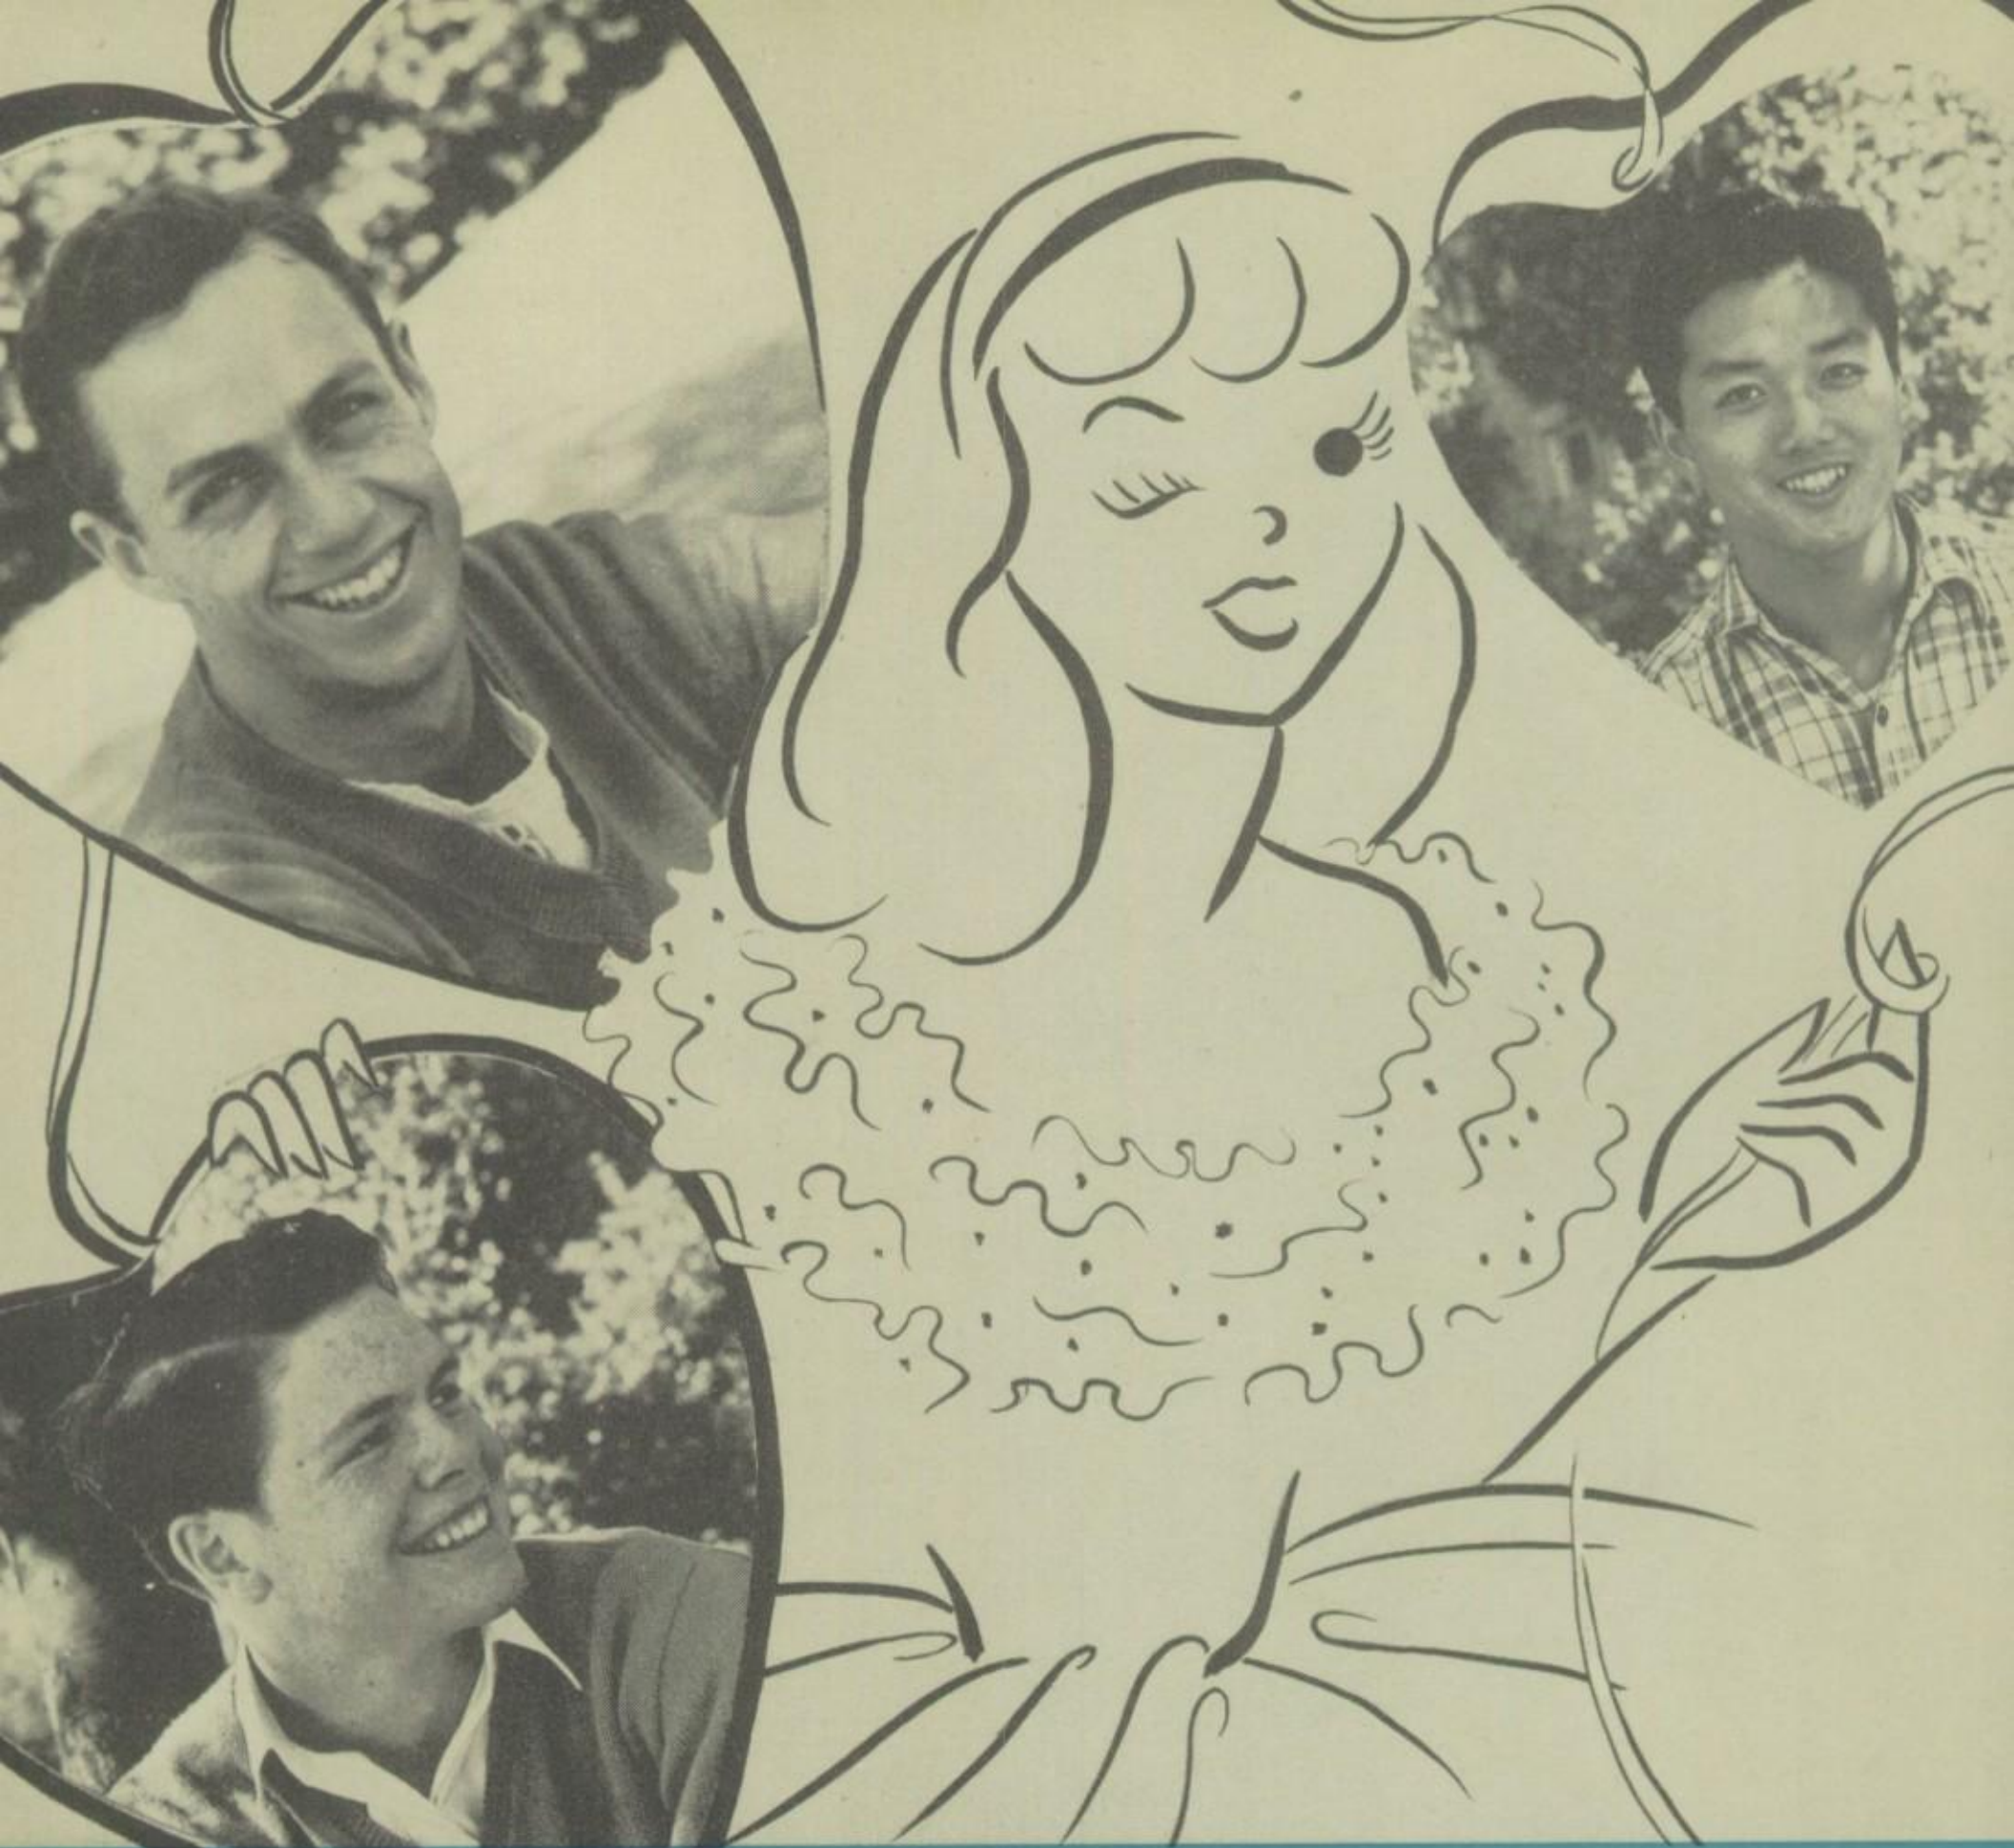

They began deceiving the world with their outward appearances. They used so much padding in their blouses that a chip on a girl's shoulder became a veritable log. Some, objecting to our statement that girls use their clothing to deceive, may point to their begins-and-ends-here bathing suits. We concede the point, but have you seen the junk a girl takes to the beach with her? She might as well be wearing an alpaca coat for all you can see of her.

Intrigue surrounded girls' relations with boys. A tremendous amount was necessary to learn the first thing, "Did he have a car?" Since our story would end here if he didn't, let's assume that he did. Now, "Could he support her in the way she was accustomed?" This manner was not necessarily that which she was used to, but the way she would have liked her previous beau to support her and he is probably her previous beau because he didn't. These hurdles past, we come to the last step, which required the most trickery of all, since it was the most important, "Did he have a ring?" Just as no trophy hunter would hunt a lion that didn't have a head, neither would any girl go after a boy who didn't have a ring that she could flash at her competitors.

The strangest side of a girl (un-anatomically speaking, of course) was her club-forming instinct. Labeled with unsavory alphabetical combinations, her clubs worked constantly to increase the air of mystery surrounding girls.

Weren't they awful? Well, speaking for ourselves, we love a mystery.

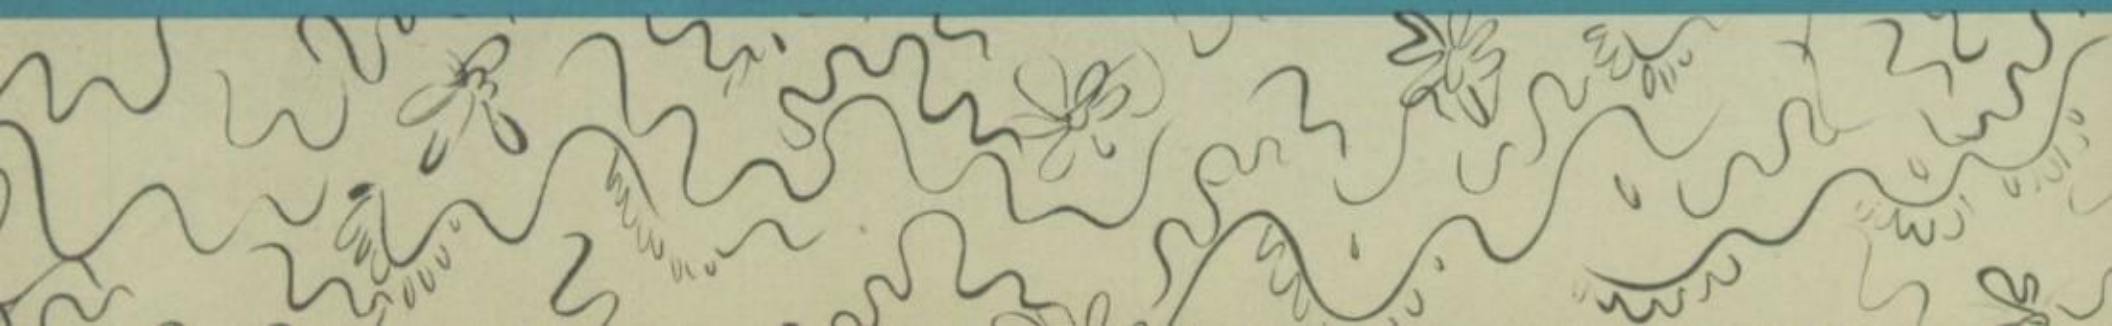

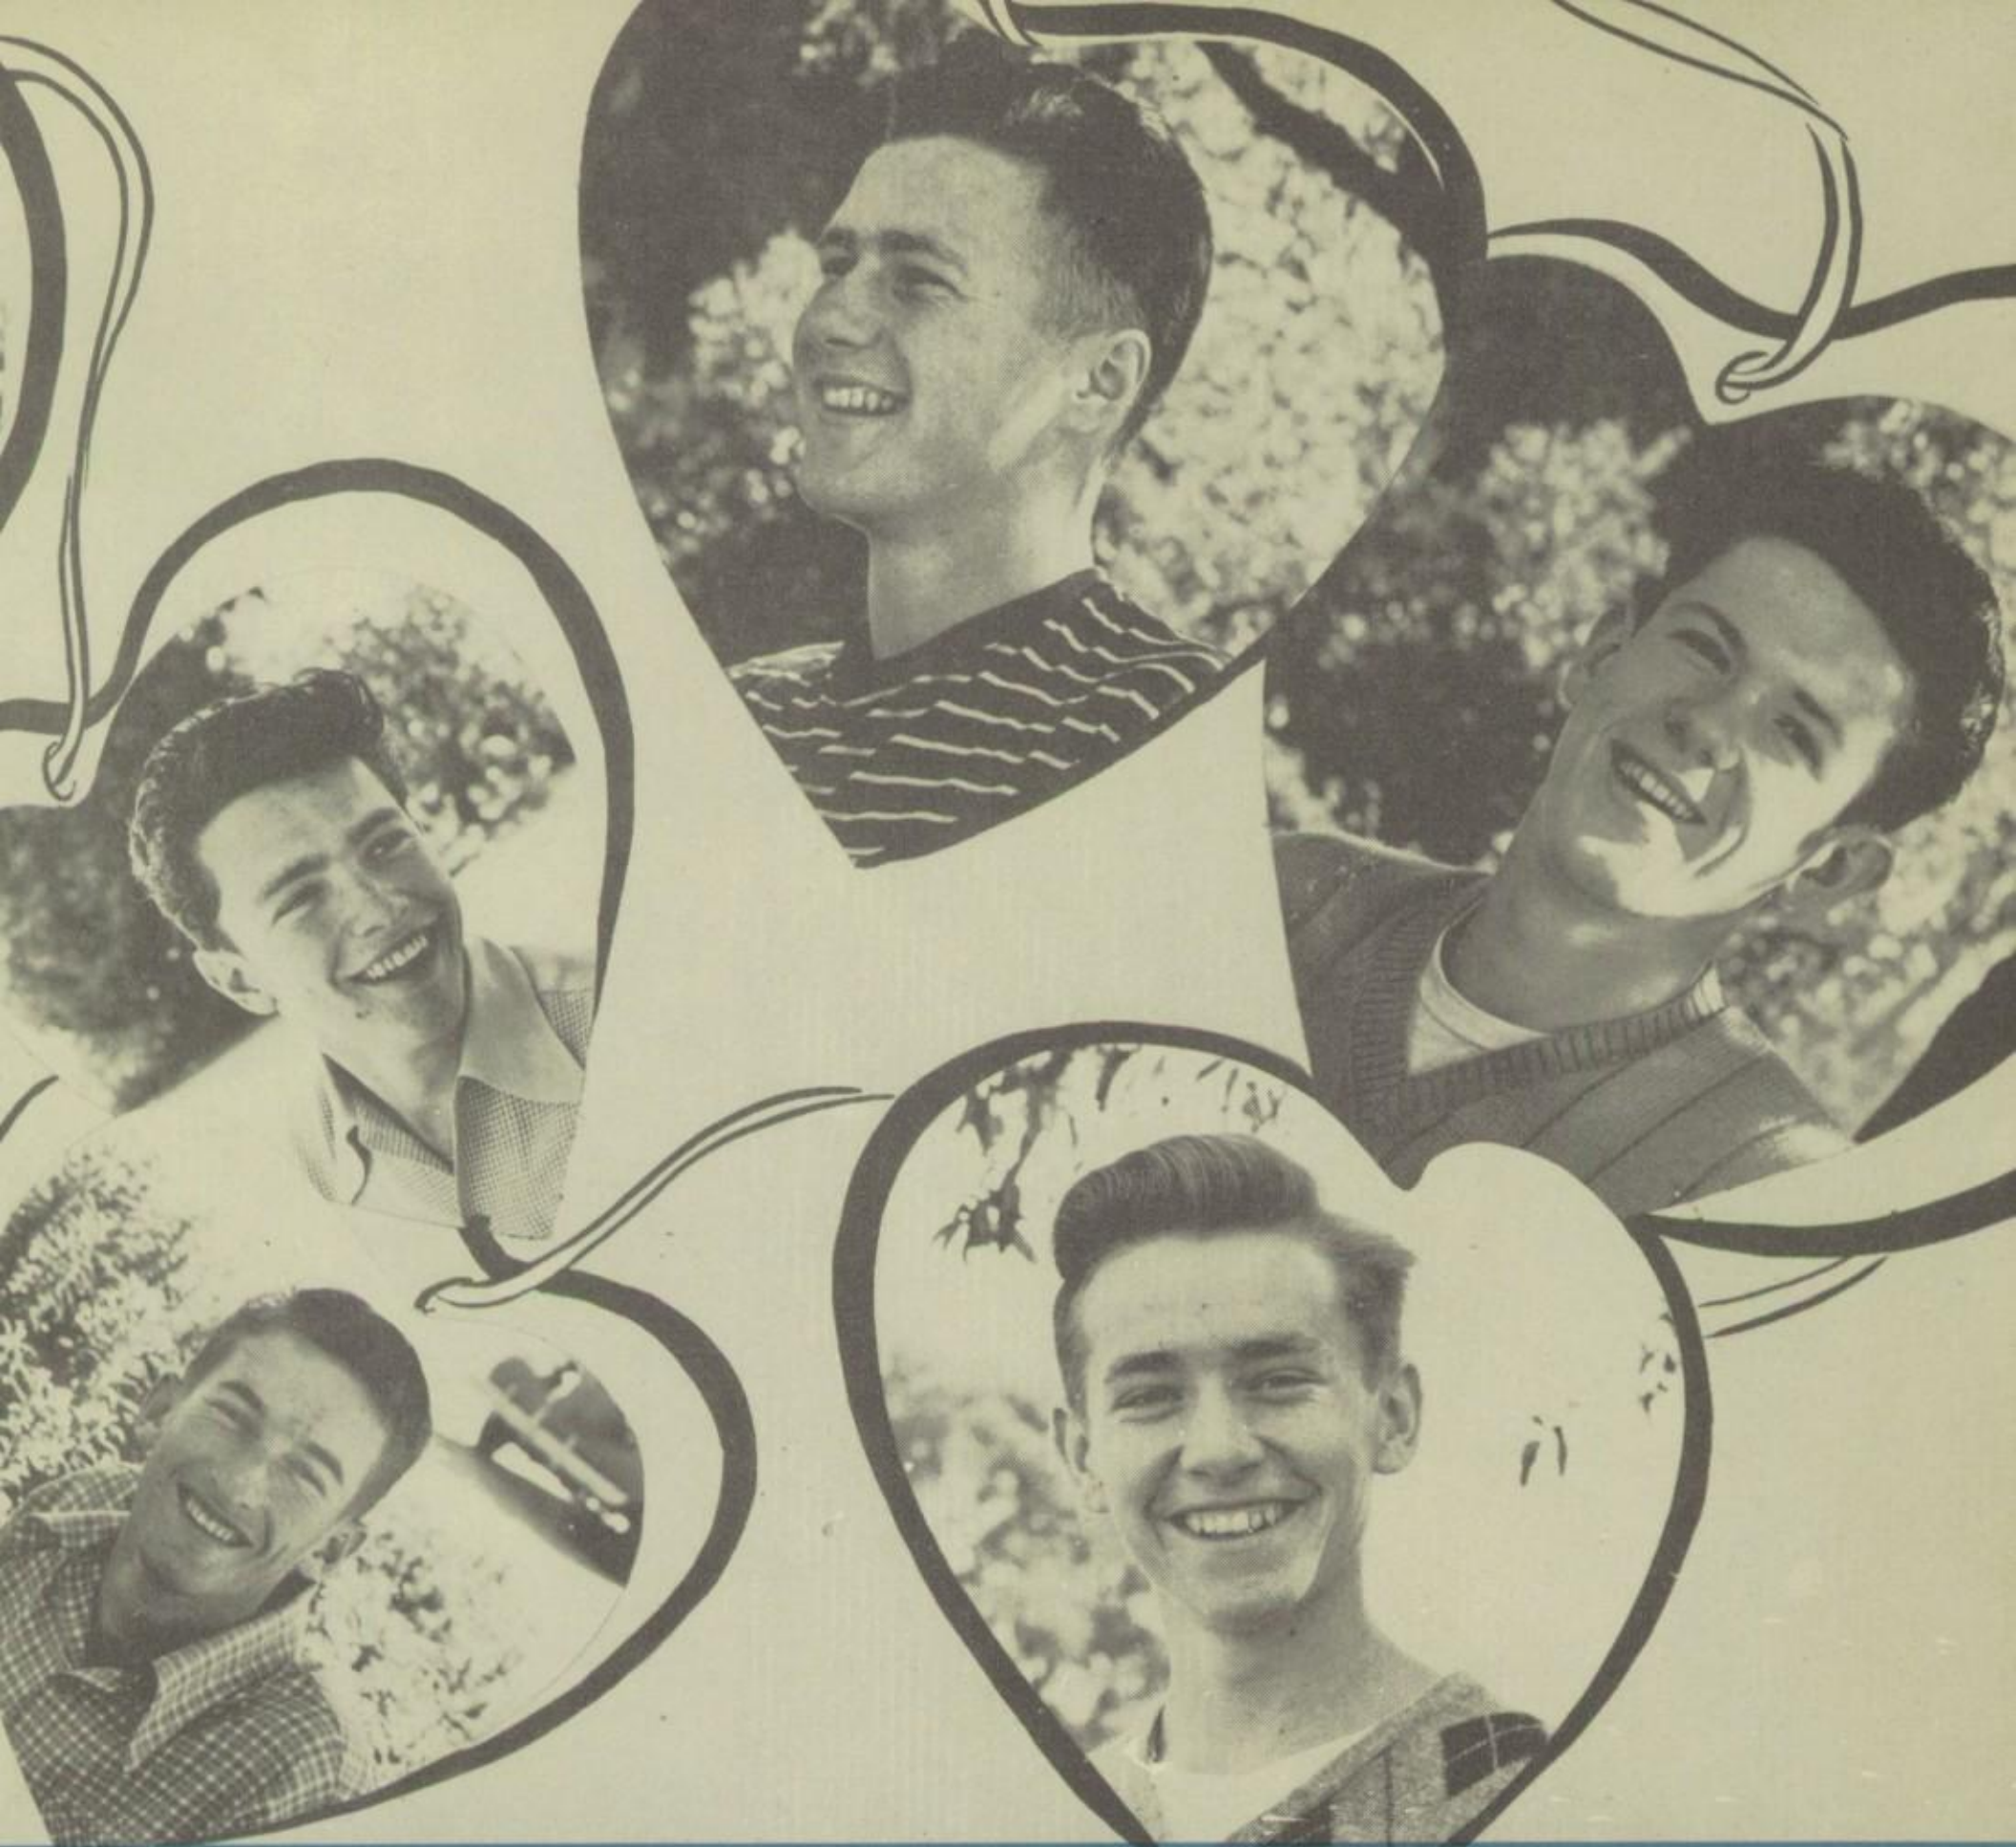

We wish we could give the boys the same soul-quickenning start we gave the girls; but, as we said, girls have a monopoly on being thought strange creatures. This, unfortunately, is not the only inequality. Boys can scream; they can whistle and stomp, too; but when screaming is heard on the radio, people say, "Oh, those silly girls!" Why aren't boys called silly? Cartoons are drawn on the vices of girls who wear bobby-sox. Boys wear bobby-sox, but nobody has exposed their vices since Mark Twain.

Boys, in one of the few instances of equality, could form clubs the same as girls. But their noble instincts were stunted here, too; for no great-hearted merchant sponsored their clubs. As a result, the only radio programs which featured the boys' clubs were those broadcast to patrol cars. The boys' clubs would soon have fallen apart, had it not been for joint meetings with girls' clubs. As a rule, the only thing joint about one of these meetings was the place where it was held. Combatants stood around in groups making nasty cracks about each other's records, dancing space and morals, until the meeting broke up with hearty resolutions on both sides that next time they were going to meet with some really hot babes, or boys, as the sex might be.

Another chance the boys had at equality was that they too could set up requirements for prospective girl friends. A girl in question simply had to be faultless.

The frequent mention of girls might lead the reader to believe that boys spent all their time thinking about girls. To the contrary, they studied constantly. In chemistry, for instance, they learned that some things are insoluble, meaning they won't melt. They had this proved abundantly to their own dissatisfaction after school hours. There's nothing like a practical education, including our school system.

SPRING

One of the most stirring things about school life was the way the students learned democracy through their own student government. It was just like a democracy, too, with a full third of those eligible to vote voting the same people into office year after year. The dominant group in the government was Mr. Kennedy's 160 study hall, which for letterhead purposes was divided into two parts: Council and Assembly.

Most of the Council obtained their positions in school-wide, lunch-period-long elections, of which the first omen was the passing around of petitions. The students always carefully checked a candidate's scholastic record and his qualifications for office before signing a petition. Their conscientiousness in this matter was clearly shown by The Russ last year when it circulated, and had fully signed, a petition nominating Genghis Khan for garbage collector.

Climaxing weeks during which many heretofore concealed friendships between voters and candidates were revealed, was the election assembly. Here, candidates proclaimed their virtue and morals, or lack of same. Students listened, agreed, applauded and voted for their friends.

Its members having been duly elected, the Council proceeded about its business, which was mostly tabling measures and resolutions. When the pile of resolutions had crowded the feet of members off the table, the council would send a few bills to its not necessarily better half, the Assembly, whose members came from those veritable hot-beds of democracy, the homerooms.

Thus the students and their elected government marched inconsequentially through the year, not really changing the world at all.

As activities came and went during the year, it was not difficult to see that different activities resulted from different moods of the students.

Take a look at football games (the fog willing). At the beginning of the year students were flushed with a feverish joy because they were back at school at last. At football games they expressed their patriotic fervor in such statements as: "Get that babe in the third row!", "Who's got my shoe?", "Pardon me, pardon, oops! Excuse me, OUCH!" and "SQUIRRRT!" Football games, as the first activities, also held a special honor as official starter of the school year. For school is actually in session only when there are activities to keep students out of it.

When enough money had been made from football games to finance activities the rest of the year and the students' earlier fever of joy had become a coma of despair, events became more dignified. Dignity was rampant at the dances given at the middle of the year. Everyone seemed to have the complex that LIFE was going to come in any minute to take pictures. They all stood around, looking at decorations that had taken the better part of a hundred forged passes to make.

In the spring the students displayed fine school spirit by joining every club they could. We know, because, coincidentally, we were taking club pictures for the annual at the time. The same amazing loyalty was demonstrated for "Carmelita." No one could rest, or even study, unless he was out making sure that Mr. Marcelli didn't need his help.

At last the end of the year came; and once again the students expressed their feeling in their activities, as they showed their profound sorrow at leaving school by frequent, not always official, ditch days.

Ah, sport! Clean living, vigorous competition just for the fun of it, no sordid monetary cares—that's how it wasn't at San Diego High School. Sport there meant a huge project where the ASB made lots of money, the players made lots of letters, and the spectators made lots of gliders.

The ASB thought it was smart when it persuaded players to work only for letters. And it was; for the resemblance between the dollar sign and the lettermen's "S" was no coincidence, since profits from games financed the rest of the ASB activities. Still, there were certain amatory wages earned by lettermen's sweaters that no amount of money could have bought.

The ASB then had to convince the spectators, who were the rest of the students, that they would profit by seeing a game. These spectators were really rooters at the games, meaning they had to dig deep every time they got a ticket.

Naturally, such a large project as sport needed advertising. This was the reason for The Russ's existence. Why else should the ASB continue to support it? The Russ was sparked (or plugged, anyway) in this endeavor by Gary Allen, who boasted that he never used the same word twice, which in many cases was a blessing. He achieved the highest altitude in his descriptive flights when he used "Hill Hog Hide Haulers" to describe these padded pill pushers. (We can do it, too!)

The admiration of the school for its bread winners didn't stop at alliteration. Since the athletes had made the school's funds, the students saw no reason why they shouldn't handle them, too, and so elected the players as officers.

SENIORS ONLY

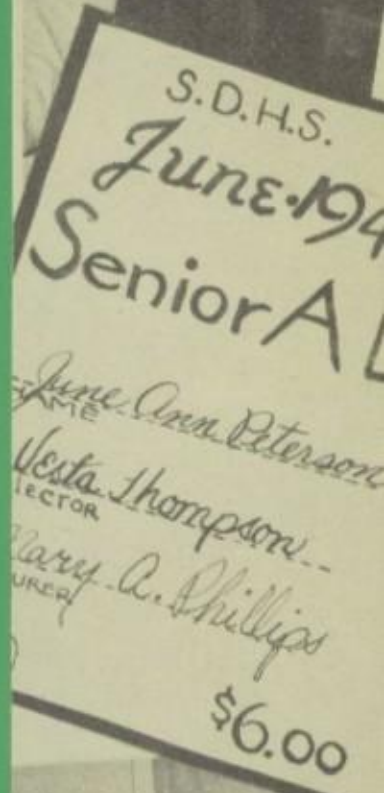

Back in their soon-to-be-thought-of-as-blissful days as underclassmen, Seniors had the idea that becoming a Senior was as simple as putting a nickel in the coke machine. And they were right—except that they were going to put a lot more than a nickel into many more things than a coke machine.

The first morale booster and wallet depresser was those genuine solid gold Senior rings, which could be made rust-proof for an extra two bits. Another item in red ink was the sweaters, aptly named for the anguish caused the Seniors while waiting for them. In order to call the garments sweaters, the makers not only stretched a point, but the yarn as well; and when the rains came, the sweaters went. Mention might be made here of some members of the class who turned their sweaters into overcrowded display boards for club pins, making sweaters clank almost as loudly as the money put into them. Next, the Seniors' mouths were made to water with thoughts of a prom and a ditch day. Then the news was broken to them that such events would cost money, which could be raised only by selling dues cards.

Plans for after graduation were problems which kept coming back like a song ("Money Is the Root of All Evil," that is), to the common denominator, finance. Some were going to work, to make back their Senior expenses; but many were going to college. The problem of getting into a college was not only a pressing one, but one that took the Seniors to the cleaners as well.

Thus the days passed, as did studies, activities and teachers. And when it came time for the Seniors to pass out, they did.

Underclassmen, according to teachers, were any Seniors who were noisy in a classroom. Underclassmen, according to Seniors, were Juniors, Sophomores or anyone else they were about to be nasty to. Underclassmen, according to Juniors, were Sophomores; and that single word was enough to express their contempt. Sophomores were too busy lording it over their former Junior High buddies to worry much about just who were underclassmen.

The wide variation in definitions, however, didn't prevent the word "Underclassmen" from being used. In the mouths of all students of all grades, it meant a large group of not-too-bright students. The greatest fear of a political candidate was that word would be passed around that the Underclassmen were going to vote for him.

The attitude of those veterans who had been here as long as two years towards the annual influx of little people was, "Look, they're coming in through the screens!" But the newcomers had an attitude, too. They saw in themselves the bright new hope of the Hilltop. They began plotting to take over the government when, fortunately, they became Juniors. Now they had spent a year here; and, since "they" had been here, that year must have been perfect. Therefore, the changes they had wanted to make as Sophomores must have been unnecessary. They were further speeded in relinquishing their old revolutionary ideas, when the new crop of Sophomores made the same amazing discoveries they had.

When they became Seniors, the last trace of any energy, selflessness or freshness left them. They were true Seniors.

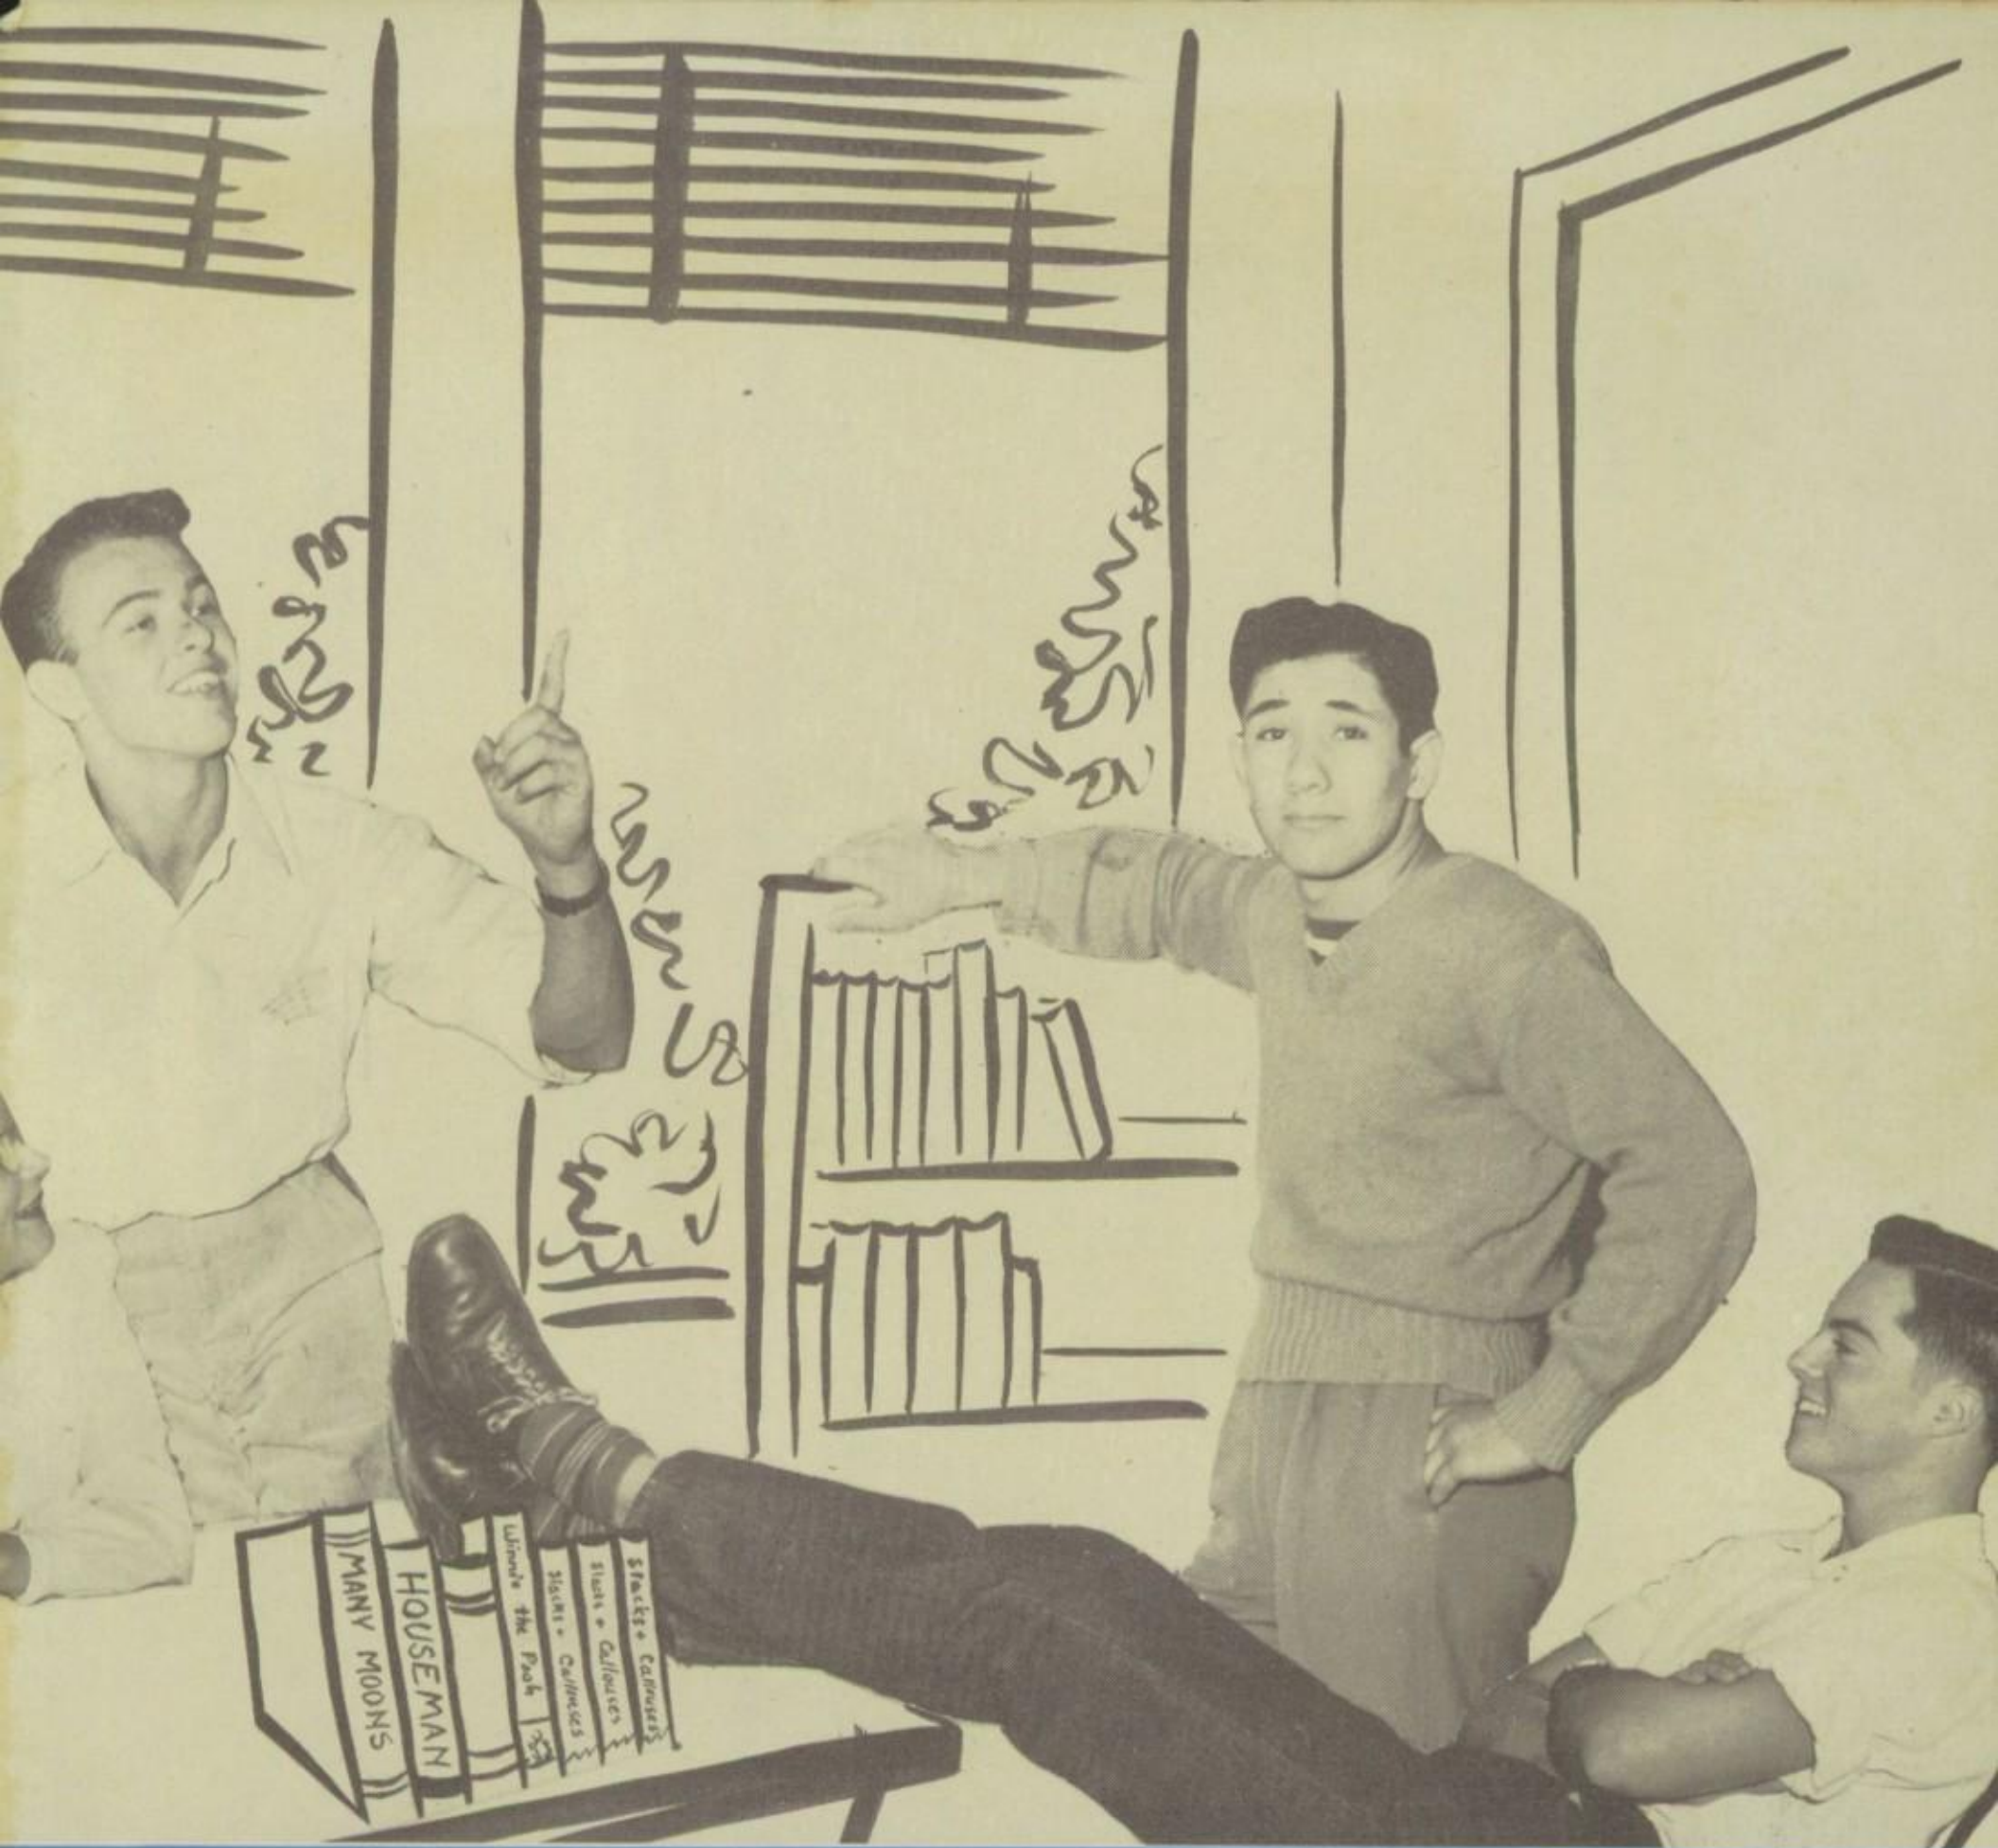

Now it has come time for us to write a pageful of cracks that will be fully appreciated by only a couple of dozen people with gripes on their lips and circles under their eyes—the Annual staff.

First, perhaps, we should describe the genius behind this volume—Miss Constance Bowman. Miss Bowman, last September, was a tall, beautiful brunette with a John Milton haircut beneath which nestled a pair of vamp glasses. Miss Bowman now—well.

When she appointed us as editors last June, we immediately filled all the positions on the Annual with our friends. By September, however, we had forgotten our previous patronage spree; and we appointed another crew of friends to the same posts. As a result, we have a matched set of Annual staffs.

In October, people began asking what the Annual's theme was. In February, about two months before the deadline, we began to show some slight curiosity, too. Miss Bowman called an all-night meeting. Here, we chatted pleasantly while Miss Bowman sweated out a theme.

During March, we sauntered around taking a few pictures (with some slight assistance from Charlie Waterman). We didn't write anything, but we kept waiting for people to ask, "How's the Annual going?" so that we could cackle, "To the dogs!", and flap away. Miss Bowman kept giving us deadlines, but we refused to be fooled by such a sweatshop device. Finally, about March 15, we began sitting up until two in the morning. We didn't ever do anything; but the way we felt gave us that comfortable martyr complex.

After all, our methods weren't slipshod; they were just no good. And only two weeks after the final and absolute deadline, we got enough copy down to the printers. The Cardinal will never miss it, anyway.

Administration

Here begins the only thing that can get the Annual back in your good graces—your pictures. Incidentally, more pictures were taken for the Annual this year than have been taken any previous year. First, however, we must pay off some political patronage by printing pictures of the faculty and the student body officers. If you can't stand those, read the activity calendar we put in this section so that you wouldn't miss our hot prose. Read it; then you'll be glad to look at the teachers.

The traditional opening of the football season, the annual Football Carnival, was, as anyone who tried to park in the upper lot can tell you, the best attended game of the year. The Carnival consisted of a half-dozen of the city's teams playing each other under the tags of East and West. The main purpose of the whole affair was to give San Diego's prep football fans a chance to see what kind of teams, cheer leaders and assorted cheesecake would be offered at this year's games. The final period brought San Diego and Hoover together with the score deadlocked at 6-all. It was a setup for a natural thriller, or would have been, were it not for Hoover's genius for turning any game into a rout. The confused Card eleven fumbled through a point-a-minute defeat to give the West a 19-6 victory.

Because The Russ needed a little more gold to fill its self-appointed role of a '49er, it promised its subscribers a special assembly. With a bandwagon equipped with everything but overdrive, The Russ, under Editor Manard Pont, sailed into its assembly, adding the extra lure of a presumably captivating Miss Print, who would be revealed (partially, at least) at the assembly. The script writer and future editor, Richard Morefield, tried putting in a plot. We'll skip its intricacies in favor of magician Jack Lueken and his unforgettable, unforgivable final act that had half the audience waving handkerchiefs at him. June Smith was revealed as Miss Print, with Carol Dayton, Violet Rakich, Marilyn Sanders and Jo Bozzo as runners up.

At Homecoming, hundreds of alumni flocked up to school to see their alma mater, and hundreds of students flocked out of school to see the visitors—or so their passes said. Head pass signer was Nan Cornell, under whose direction dozens of assistants worked for weeks getting the extensive program in shape. The first activity of the day was a double assembly. To the theme of "Through the Years," Izzy Maggay made like Rudolph Valentino, Cathy Crates like Shirley Temple, and Red Chambers like Sir Harry Lauder. In the afternoon there was a dance, named in the great tradition of alliteration, "Homecoming Hobble." That evening students and grads were gluttoned with glory as they sat on the long end of a 40-0 victory over Pasadena.

The Cavemen didn't need to pass and run; they just tossed and walked to win a not too exciting numbers game from Hoover, 48 to 7. Bailey's boys grabbed a Hoover fumble on the Card 20 in the first period and scored in two plays. After an exchange of punts, San Diego took over on Hoover's 48 and in four plays produced a second touchdown, shortly followed by a third when the Cards lost a lateral on their own 26. A fourth Hill score was set up by Joe Brown's interception and 66-yard runback. The Hilltop third string was held scoreless in the third period; but in the fourth quarter, Marinos made the last tally. Thus, in one night, San Diego High won the City championship, the Coast Prep League, and entrance into the Southern California Playoffs.

None of the twenty thousand fans in the Balboa Stadium saw what he did, and from the 19 to 6 final score it was obvious that the San Diego team hadn't seen much of him either. Playing in fog so dense that the spectators couldn't see past the sideline stripes, Al Pollard of Loyola twice broke away for runs of 70 and 80 yards to provide the margin of victory for his team. The Hillers had command in the first quarter; but Loyola went to the front in the second quarter for an advantage they never relinquished. Thus the Hillers again lost a chance at the SCIF championship. But things will be different next year; at least, they will be if the Seniors follow our advice and make their gift to the old school some smudge pots.

Weaving their way through multi-colored streamers, Seniors bravely faced the perils of the dance floor and of Friday the thirteenth. The Senior Sport Dance, held on that fated day, was appropriately (and punlessly, for once) named Superstition. The planning of John Shaw and his committee was evident to the many couples who first dared fate when they bought the bids with a clever sketch of a Hilltopper under a ladder. Appropriate decorations included murals of black cats, lucky seven on the dice, eight balls and broken mirrors. The most outstanding props were the ladders on each side of the floor, which in an attempt to lure Hillers beneath them, were decorated with inconspicuous sprigs of mistletoe. Despite a touch of Loyola fog that night, the dance was a great success, almost breaking even.

A week before Christmas vacation, the student body received an opportunity to hear its Choir's fine artistry at a special assembly. The choir, appearing in its new blue robes against the background of a huge Yuletide wreath, was introduced by members of Mrs. Weis's sophomore class, who had prepared a special script for the occasion. All or parts of the Choir had engagements for every day in December up to Christmas, singing at the YWCA, the Women's Club and a special performance Christmas Eve at the Hotel Del Coronado. The group also represented the Hilltop in the City Schools Christmas Pageant, presented before packed audiences the three nights before Christmas vacation, in the Russ Auditorium.

From the number of people eating lunch outside, you would never have known that an election was going on. They probably didn't know either. Inside, however, half the student body was deciding what would happen to the other half the next semester. A special political meeting having already been given for the Sophomores, a remarkably calm assembly was held for the whole school the day before elections. The one bright point was Shirley Rogers, who proved that it pays to be funny. When the elections finally came, the opinions of those few who did vote were pretty evenly divided; three of the contests had to be run over again. The notable exception was Jim Marinos's overwhelming landslide into the ASB presidency.

Amid an orgy of food, decorations and gravity flow evening gowns, one hundred of the Hilltop's Big Time Operators proclaimed their achievements, titles and honors at the annual ASB Banquet. After a solid hour, during which every minor official received his due applause, the winners of the ASB election were announced. Not without her share of the applause was Joan Foster, who arranged the banquet and its decorations. The banquet was followed by the Royal Ball. Under its three chairmen, Dick LeLaurin, Hi Dillin and Dave Drossman, the ball carried out its royal theme in art with decorations of crowns, carpets and thrones. Suffering from a royalty complex, the dance went all the way and elected a King and Queen. Ruling jointly for the first of many times were Shirley Rogers and John Holloway.

To signify the passing of another semester and most of the students, the Girls' League and Boys' Federation collaborated to present "Crammers' Crawl." Any effort to put meaning into the name was lost in the scramble to get two words beginning with the same letter. They probably would have called it "Leopard Leap" had they not been afraid of a spotty showing. In March we fully expected two dances entitled "Lion's Claw" and "Lamb Chop." "Crammers' Crawl" was a turnabout dance. The attendance at such a dance is always interesting because it reveals girls' secret passions. Ringleaders of the affair were Jane Hussey and Jim Marinos. They were aided by enough people to turn this report into a minor census; suffice it to say, they all did a swell job.

There was no fog this time—just a stream of sweat pouring from the San Diego stands; but Hoover beat us, 43-32. We wish that was all there was to it, but with cruel deliberation events built up to focus attention on that game. Having squeaked by the Cardinals once, the Hillers lost to them on their home dirt. The third and deciding game had to be held in the afternoon to discourage alumni from attending. In the first quarter, play was nip and tuck with the Hillers gaining their first and last lead; by the end of the half Hoover was ahead, 28-16. In the third period the Hillers forged within three points of Hoover; in the last, however, the Cards swept on to the Coast League championship.

Organizations

In the next section, you will see pictures of dozens of clubs whose interests range from horses to humans. Just remember this: the number of pictures a person is in doesn't necessarily show how popular he was, but merely how many times he was able to get out of class. Maybe this was the reason we had such trouble getting people to identify themselves for the pictures: they didn't want the Attendance Office to catch up with them for ditching. The Calendar, incidentally, keeps on stopping the clock throughout this section.

When the Sergeanettes have a blowout, it never goes flat. Such was the case with their annual ball, "Winter Wonderland." The Sergeanettes took no chances, making the dating both turnabout and the usual run-around. Although condemned at the start by its name, the ball came through with the best attendance of any dance during the year. Elections were held for King and Queen, better known as John Holloway and Shirley Rogers. Jeannie Robinson was announced as the new colonel; and Lavene Myers, the new major. Long after midnight, couples were still trying to bribe their coats back from the overcrowded check room. Some simply left without them, only to find that it was still winter, but certainly no wonderland, outside.

The only thing surprising about the Senior Skating Party was the absence of a fancy name like "Skater's Scaunch" or "Frigid Frenzy." Thanks to this lack, the party was a truly fine event and served its purpose of prompting the Seniors to buy their dues. The party lasted from 2:30 till 5, but chairman Werner Heuschele didn't. He went down early in the first round with a broken collar bone, leaving the management to his assistants, Leon White and Fabus Janise. A hockey game between the boys was scrambled to a 2-0 ending, followed by an 8-1 slaughter between two girls' teams. The champion teams then met and abruptly parted when Ernie Andrews and Ruthie Stange collided. After a balloon race, won by John Shaw, the free-for-all returned. Quite a few denied themselves those icy thrills this time.

Last year when Coach Morrow returned from the Navy, he had only a few weeks to shape up the team that eventually became a Southern California champion. Before it could get rolling, however, it lost a game to Tucson. This year the Desert Diamond boys rode into town heavy favorites; but they left after a triple whipping, looking like the riders with the purple rage. The next week San Diego engaged Muir. With Pete Corona allowing the opposition only three hits, the Hill Horsehide Heavers triumphed, 11-0. The day after that they cleaned up on the other Northerner, Pasadena High. Thus, as the Annual goes to press, we predict another championship team, if only for the reason that Coach Morrow's old championship sweater is wearing out. He needs a new one.

Rainy skies cleared briefly at Huntington Beach as the Hiller track team came within four-fifths of a point of winning the Southern Counties Track Meet. Fired or burned up, anyway, by the poached eggs and milk forced down them just before the event, more than forty spikesters grabbed second place for the Hilltop in one of the biggest and fastest meets in the country. Among those contributing to the Hillers' near victory were Harold Miller, third in the 100-yard dash and tie for first in the 200; John Holloway, first in his heat in the 440, and Henry Cagle, second in the 880. The crucial point in the meet came in the pole vault, when Norman Yorba set a record of 12 feet which no one equaled until both Hoover and Grossmont surpassed it and dropped the Hillers into second place in the meet.

Nino Marcelli's "Carmelita" was the biggest thing of its kind ever presented at San Diego High, and it required the services of every student who could sing, act, draw, build or forge passes. "Carmelita" was no horse opera; but it had all the props for one: a beautiful feminine star, Joan Sieger; an equally handsome male lead, John Holloway; and a whole crew of villains frenziedly referred to as "Na-VA-jos!" When it was all over, the school relinquished its role of impresario, but not the glory gained by having had enough courage and talent to present the operetta. Special credit goes to the music and art departments, and of course to the Attendance Office, which was beginning to collect royalties this spring by selling the absence lists as city directories.

In the precarious equation of Senior finances, one of the largest unknown factors is the Senior Play. Often its success decides whether the Prom is to be at the ballroom in Mission Beach or in the barn at Santee. To put over such an important project as the play, a crowd of Seniors took on a regular period all through the Spring semester to perfect their performance in "The Admirable Crichton" that the Prom would be saved from a rural rendezvous. Leads were Jerry Dahms, Barbara Stewart and John Smith. True artists must sacrifice all to their profession, and the boys were true artists in this sense at least; for they had to sacrifice haircuts. Thus was hailed the departure of the famous Dahms brush. As we write this, two months before the play, we are confident that the Prom will be paid for; but we are keeping some horses saddled.

As graduation approached, sweaters, rings and cokes alone could not satisfy the Seniors' craving for special privileges, so extra favors were added. The Seniors felt that those parents lucky enough to have Seniors for children should be especially honored. A Mothers' Tea, arranged by Jane Hussey, featured the spring Girls' League fashion show. The coming of girls' fathers, as well as the boys', to the Dads and Grads' event broke another precedent. The outing, bossed by Everett Miner, was in Balboa Park where, after games, a picnic supper was served. Seniors themselves interrupted their tearful leave-taking to have a Ditch Day at Del Mar arranged by Dick Iverson. Thus, through these events, the absence of Seniors from class the last few days of school was made official.

Once again it had come time for new officers to be elected, old officers to be congratulated, and both groups to have a free feed on the school. In other words, it was the week of the ASB election, banquet and ball. A few predictions as the Annual goes to press: that day about forty Hillers, under the direction of some Sheik, got out of class to prepare the gym for the ball, which was probably called "Winsome Wind Up" or "Parting Parley." The Swing Band played its same never-changing repertoire. The decorations, which were lavish, were supervised by Mr. Vernacchia. He did a tremendous job and deserves special recognition for his work on this year's dances. The banquet that night was on the same order as the one in January, except that there were more people expecting to be applauded.

Not only did the Seniors have outings at the end of the year, but they had certain ceremonies, too. Seniors received a message of faith when Vespers were held at the First Baptist Church. Florence Durson arranged the program, which was attended by Seniors of all faiths. Hardly on the same level, but a ceremony nevertheless, was the Gift Day Assembly on June 18. Under the guidance of Don Lyons, Gift Day stalked with full majesty through the usual corny routines, old jokes and certain contests of dark implications. A ceremony is an event where everyone stands rooted to the spot while a few people saw away on something. Such was the Prom. The boys, straight-jacketed in their new tuxes, and the girls, made cautious by gravity flow formals, stood frozen as the band played on.

The culmination of twelve years of carved desks, long lunch lines and increasing boy-girl combinations was Graduation. The feeling of Graduation extended all through the Senior year; but the final cleavage came at Commencement. There, before thousands of friends and parents, the Seniors ended their stay with the San Diego City Schools. Setting up a program for a graduation is difficult; for each year it must be different, yet the ideas and questions of teen-agers are always the same. Commencement chairman was De Etta Jasper, and working with her as chairman of the script committee was Bob Smith. The final theme chosen was Individual Responsibility. And on this impressive note, an equally impressive year at San Diego High ended.

Sports

Now we pay tribute to those financiers of the school—the athletes. Here we have pictures of teams of all the sports from football to golf. We tried to print a picture of a leading player in each sport, too. With our luck, though, we probably have a choice selection of second-stringers; so maybe you got in. This section has an even greater attraction because of the fact that our activity calendar ended in the last division.

Although they took a double licking from Loyola High's Bruins, the San Diego High Hillers closed the 1946 chapter of the Gray Castle pigskin album with six triumphs against the pair of setbacks.

Among the outstanding achievements recorded by the Cave squad were winning the Coast League title, beating Hoover twice, and placing six San Diego players on the Coast Loop's mythical all-star contingent. These Hillers were Tackle Gene Edwards, Guard Bob Conklin, Center Jim Erkenbeck, Quarterback Jerry Dahms, Halfback Ted Ritchey and Fullback John Brown. Coach Bill Bailey was named mentor of the aggregation.

Scores: Hoover (in Carnival), 13-0; Loyola, 12-13; Saint Augustine, 32-0; Bakersfield, 13-7; Compton, 19-12; Pasadena, 40-0; Hoover, 48-7; and Loyola, 6-19.

The Jayvee also upheld the Hilltop in high school jayvee contests, but didn't do so well against other opponents. Some of Coach Patten's leading players were Earl Youngs, Jim Smith, Neal Henderson, Nando Romero, Jimmy Sue, Tony Diaz, Ray Irving, Manuel Smith, Raymond Torres, and Bill Ginos.

When basketball season came to the Hilltop this year, it was looked upon as only a lull between football and baseball. The chances did not look good. Coach Merrill Douglas had only recently returned from the service, there were few returning lettermen, San Diego had been sadly beaten the previous season, and the first game was dropped to the Alumni.

Once the bets had been made and the unfavorable odds had been established, however, the team began to improve. It took third place in the Compton tourney and then the consolation prize at Chino.

The winning streak was interrupted when Hoover took the second of the Crosstown series games. They also won the third.

S.D.H.S. put on a final burst of glory, however, and ended the season with an unexpected clean-up at Beverly Hills, making a season record of 25 wins and 5 losses.

Unquestionably, the outstanding player of the year was Ben Cendali, a three-year letterman and top scorer who made 37 points in one game.

The season's scores were Alumni, 23-25; Compton Tourney, third place; Point Loma, 38-27; State B's, 20-31; Chino Tourney, consolation; Grossmont, 28-20; Compton, 25-26; Pasadena, 45-32; Muir, 36-19; Hoover, 31-28; Compton, 27-19; Saint Augustine, 33-22; Point Loma, 27-25; Muir, 42-29; Compton, 29-25; Hoover, 26-34; Saint Augustine, 42-23; Pasadena, 59-26; Grossmont, 35-19; Muir, 62-22; Hoover, 32-43; Beverly Hills Tourney, championship; and Coast League, second place.

The Cave Bees, second only to Compton, came through with a stack of smashing victories, too. They were coached by the Hilltop's newest mentor, Duane Maley.

The season's scores were Alumni, 30-26; Brown Military, 65-18; Point Loma, 40-32, 35-23, 41-14; Grossmont, 29-21; Compton, 25-33, 16-30, 30-34; Pasadena, 37-23, 41-20; La Jolla, 29-30; Muir, 47-21, 33-22; Hoover, 37-29, 28-22, 39-28; Saint Augustine, 48-20; Coast League, second place.

John Verduco, Baseball
Ben Cendali, Tennis
Frank Morey, Golf

This year's track team, though good, failed to equal previous records. The early season meets, however, were but a prelude to the prep classic, the Coast League track meet, in which the Hill spikespinners managed to take third.

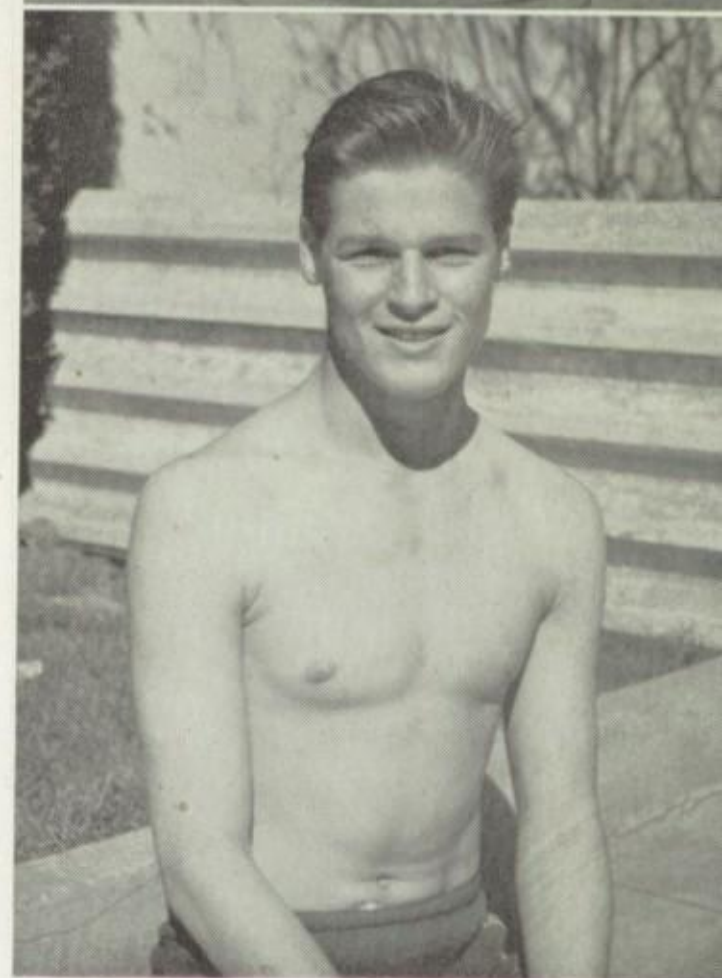

Bob Smith, named All-American scholastic pole vaulter by Look Magazine, was the outstanding member of the team.

Scores: La Jolla, A's, 78-26; B's, 40-55; C's, 38-40; La Jolla (2nd meet), 57-35, 23½-53½; Wilson, 63-41; Kearny, 85-19, 75-15, 47-30; Huntington Beach, 29-1/5 (second by 4/5 point); Hoover, 52-52, 50-45, 45½-33; Hoover-Compton-Muir-Pasadena, 91½; Coast League, 36½ (third place); SCIF, 8, 4, 8.

The '47 baseball season was marked by two things: an excellent team and rotten luck. Coach Morrow is tops; the team had many seasoned veterans; and this combination won most of the games. Only bad luck, therefore, can explain why the team failed in a few contests.

The first defeat came from Hoover. With a second defeat at the hands of Hoover, the Hilltop lost any chance at the Coast League Championship; but it finished third in the League by passing Pasadena and Compton.

Scores: Alumni, 5-2; Point Loma, 2-1; Tucson, 9-5, 10-9, 17-5; Muir 11-0, 8-2; Pasadena, 6-2, 10-0; Hoover, 6-10, 6-7; Long Beach Wilson, 8-1; Compton, 1-6, 17-4; Tucson, 0-3, 4-1, 1-2.

Girls' sports were carried on under the direction of the Girls' Athletic Association. Any girl could belong to the GAA; but the effects didn't begin to show until she had participated in four team sports and one individual sport, at which time she was awarded a numeral.

If she went on to participate in eight team sports and two individuals, she received a letter; further neglect of her homework brought a pin. Those who had numerals, letters and pins belonged to the Letterettes, a group that held dinner meetings once a month.

Another activity was a play day presented for ninth grade girls about to enter the Hilltop, at which they were given a premonition of future athletic activities here.

Seniors

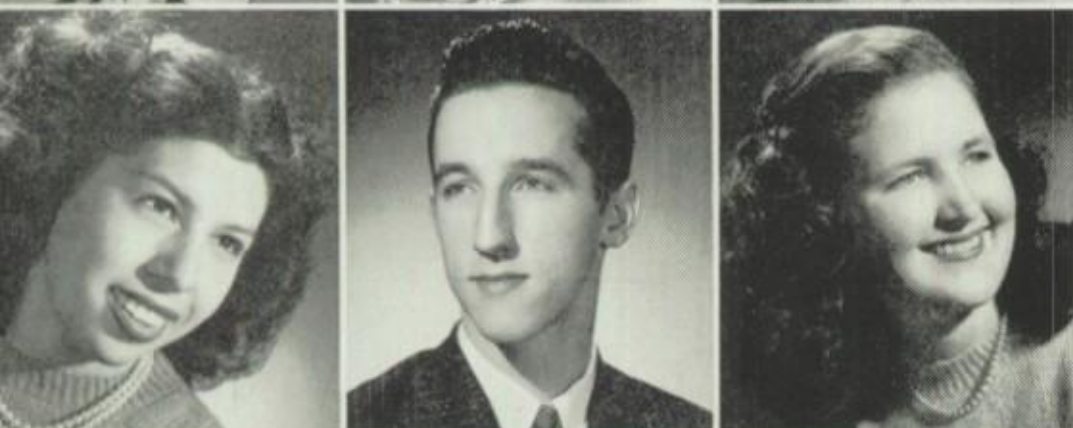

Have we forgotten something? Come now, Seniors; you know that if we left you out, we'd be leaving our necks out. So here you are, in all your retouched glory. To liven up the section for Underclassmen, we wrote up the lives of eight Seniors of Distinction. You yourselves may want to read them a few years from now, when you've finished looking at your pictures. Until then, Happy Contemplation!

John Holloway

Some Seniors worked up to distinction; others suddenly burst into it; but John Holloway had simply been there longer than anyone could remember.

So great was his reputation when he arrived at SDHS that he was appointed to one of the nastiest positions in school—the Sophomore presidency. Nor was the Russ sports page allowed to forget his name; for he went out for three sports.

In his Junior year, there again was Holloway in football, basketball and track. His admitted ability also had won him another fitting award—a tough, undesirable job—Student Judge.

Then John got another job entailing work, time and little thanks, the Senior A Presidency. At the same time, he was starring in track and giving a splendid performance as lead (male) in "Carmelita." And let us confirm your suspicion of our admiration for him by reporting that he made straight A's for three years.

We sure feel sorry for the guy. He never learned to sit back and let somebody else do the work, like the rest of us.

Carol Lucina Dayton—Head Song Leader, G.L. Representative, Girl Reserves, Swimmerettes, San Diego State College.

Nan Cornell

Don't believe the picture; for Nan Cornell's watchword was "DO." Nan was one of that poor, deluded group who came to high school determined to have the adjective "active" applied to them.

Think of the careful plotting she did and over-whelming joy she had when, as a sophomore, she won that coveted post, Girls' League Library Chairman. Don't underestimate that job; for what she learned in getting it, she applied successfully to winning the Girls' League vice presidency.

But, like every politician, Nan made a mistake. She got on the Junior cabinet, in charge of the Cave-Inn for Junior Week. Anyone connected with that project was left in the shadows long after its passing; and Nan lost the Girls' League presidency in the June elections. She didn't get back in the running until she appeared as Homecoming Chairman. After a masterful job on that activity, she swept on to win the Girls' League's top post.

We'll never underestimate a librarian again.

Jim Marinos

Usually our star athletes don't have a flair for government, though they may be elected to office on their popularity and sports record. A lucky exception to this rule was Jim Marinos.

Even as a sophomore he was on the J.V. football and basketball teams. As a Junior, he returned to his football and added J.V. baseball. Already politics were beginning to edge him out of his chosen field, for he was elected vice president of the Little "S" Club. The final wedge was driven that June when he became Boys' Fed. prexy.

As a senior B, Jim was still in sports, but only by the seat of his pants. He lost the first string quarterback spot to Jerry Dahms and kept Coach Douglas company on the bench most of the basketball season.

In January, he ran for ASB president against four candidates and racked up a tremendous majority. As the ASB Calendar filled up with more and more activities, he showed that the voters' trust had not been misplaced.

Eleanor M. Jones

Jane Hussey

The wages of sin may be death; but the wages of virtue, as earned by Jane Hussey, are rough tweeds and a short haircut. Imagine! She has never been able to wear a bandana, go without socks or open her collar.

She began her march to disaster as a Junior B, when she became chairman of the Girls' League's social service. Her fate as an example of morality was sealed the next semester when she became, not only a member of the student court, but Girls' League vice prexy as well.

Rarely had the League found one whose natural desires had been throttled so completely; and it sat her down on that pinpoint of a good conduct medal, the League presidency. Even after a semester spent writhing in pain there, she wasn't able to break free, and in her Senior A semester she entered that straitjacket of good behavior, the Mothers' Tea chairmanship.

Aren't you devastated by her ill-fortune? Well, frankly, we feel more for those condemned to follow her example.

Ben Cendali

From his appearance, you wouldn't know that Ben Cendali was a star in anything. Without his glasses he can't see across the room; he has trouble with a bum knee; and he never shoots off his mouth or his letterman's sweater.

Yet Ben was one of the greatest basketball and tennis players that San Diego has ever seen. A three year basketball letterman, Ben deserves such honors as: high point man for three consecutive years, co-captain last year and captain this year, member of the Victory League team two years, the Coast Prep League team and the Beverly Hills all-tournament team this year.

With a great athletic record behind him, Ben felt that he was qualified to be ASB president. The student body thought so too and elected him. He tried for the Senior A presidency this semester but lost. Defeat left him free to wind up the year playing tennis and cluttering up the trophy case.

Shirley Rogers

Most of the people in the Hot Shot Parade have worked and schemed since they were Sophomores to achieve their present exalted positions. Not Shirley Rogers! She just leaped out from behind the xylophone that had hidden her in the band, and there she was.

Her first upward jump was to band major, where for a semester she let tight slacks do the work of sequins. At the election assembly in January, she chucked, with machine-like precision, a dozen well-plotted naive cracks that, while being beneath the standards of some of the listeners, were definitely not over their heads. As a result, she was elected ASB vice prexy by a powerful majority.

Her new-found popularity didn't end there, however, for at the ASB Ball she was elected queen. To make sure her blood was completely blue, she did a repeat performance of this royalty act for the Sergeantettes Ball.

It's too bad she didn't get out from behind that xylophone sooner.

Jerry Dahms

No, that isn't an eight-hundred building over there; that's Jerry Dahms, the punch ending to a string of three brothers who have kept San Diego High on top in sports for longer than Hoover likes to remember.

He began his sports career as a Sophomore in football and by the time he was a Junior he had become our leading tackle. This year he forsook the line position which would have guaranteed him a spot on the All-SCIF team and became quarterback. Taking over duties completely strange to him, he finished the season as captain of the team and quarterback on the All-Coast League crew.

On the varsity basketball squad he really hit his stride at the Beverly Hills Tourney, where he won a silver basketball and a second-string all-tourney berth for his playing. Then he went into baseball as a heavy-hitting catcher.

Dahms, though, refused to be benched when the year's sports ended. Having trod the gridiron, the hardwood and the diamond, he finished by trodding the boards as a truly Admirable Crichton.

Mary Ann Phillips

For some reason, when Seniors thought of Mary Ann Phillips, they thought of wealth. And it wasn't because of her silvery laugh or golden hair; for she was Senior Treasurer, and as such she tried to collect six dollars from every Senior.

She must have felt some pre-destination of her fate when she was elected Junior B vice president. Here, her basically innocent nature was first exposed to the sordid fact that activities cost money. The methods of collecting that money she learned when she was elected Girls' League treasurer the next semester.

Trying to escape her fate, she desperately struck out in a new field, journalism. Mary Ann had learned how to gather and to handle money; now she learned its power. For, working on The Russ and the Annual, she saw how people would sell their souls to get their names in print.

Thus, when the Senior A semester came, she met inexorable fate.

So we're broke.

Honor Roll

The Scholarship Honor Roll of the Class of June 20, 1947, has been compiled in the office of the high school. This record is based on the work of the five senior high school semesters. All pupils whose semester grades of "A" (superior) number eleven or more are placed on the honor roll. A perfect record for the five semesters would be twenty "A's," as the average pupil carries four subjects each semester. A few honor pupils are able to carry five subjects and thus accumulate more than twenty "A's" during their high school courses.

Note: Pupils who enter with grades of "A" from other schools will have their "A's" accepted for the honor roll providing they make as good grades while in attendance at San Diego High School.
